HUMBOLDT.—The first impression made by Humboldt's face is that of a broad and genial humanity. His massive brow, heavy with the gathered wisdom of nearly a century, bends forward and overhangs his breast, like a ripe ear of corn; but as you look below it, a pair of clear blue eyes, almost as bright and steady as a child's, meet your own. In those eyes you read that trust in man, that infatuation of the heart, which make the snows of eighty-seven winters lie so lightly upon his head. You trust him utterly at the first glance, and you feel that he will trust you, if you are worthy of it. I had approached him with a natural feeling of reverence, but in five minutes I found that I loved him, and could talk with him as freely as with a friend of my own age. His nose, mouth and chin have the heavy Tenthonic character, whose genuine type always expresses an honest simplicity and directness. * * * I was most surprised by the youthful character of his face. I knew that he had been frequently indisposed during the present year, and had been told that he was beginning to show the marks of his extreme age; but I could not help but suspect him of being over seventy-five. His wrinkles are few and small, and his skin has a smoothness and delicacy rarely seen in old men. His hair, although snow-white, is still abundant, his step slow but firm, and his manner active almost to restlessness. He sleeps but four hours out of the twenty-four, reads and replies to his daily mail of letters, and suffers no single occurrence of the least interest in any part of the world to escape his attention. I could not perceive that his memory, the first mental faculty to show decay, is at all impaired. He talks rapidly, with the greatest apparent ease, never hesitating for a word, whether in English or German, and, in fact, seemed to be unconscious which language he was using, as he changed five or six times in the course of the conversation. He did not remain in his chair more than ten minutes at a time, frequently getting up and walking about the room, now and then pointing to a picture or opening a book to illustrate some remark. * * * "You have traveled much, and seen many ruins," said Humboldt, as he gave me his hand again; "how you have seen one more." "Not a ruin," I could not help replying, "but a pyramid. For I learned the hand which had touched that of Frederick the Great, of Foster, (the companion of Capt. Cook), of Klopstock and Schiller, of Pitt, Napoleon, Josephine, the Marshalls of the Empire, Jefferson, Hamilton, Wieland, Herder, Goethe, Cuvier, La Place, Gay-Lussac, Beethoven, Walter Scott; in short, of every great man whom Europe has produced for three-quarters of a century. I looked into the eyes which had not only seen this living history of the world pass by, scene after scene, till the actors retired, one by one, to return no more, but had beheld the entrance of Atures and the forests of the Cassiquiare, Chimborazo, the Amazon and the Andes, the Altitian Alps of Siberia, the Tartar steppes and the Caspian Sea. Such a splendid record of experience well befits a life of such generous devotion to science. I have never seen so sublime an example of old age—crowned with imperishable success, full of the ripest wisdom, cheered and sweetened by the noblest attributes of the heart. A ruin indeed! Not a human temple, perfect as the Parthenon!"

A REAL NABOB IN PARIS.—An East-Indian from Singapore has been astonishing the Parisians by the story-book sort of caprice with which he spends his treasures. Boundlessly wealthy, he acts like a courtier and a common-place Aladdin. He was first heard of, from having fallen in the way of a well-known theatrical manager, who happened to be in want of a large sum of money to redeem his property from embarrassment. The Aladdin gave it to him like a pinch of snuff, asking for no security except a free entrée and admission behind the scenes.

Shortly after, this son of Ali-Baba took a fancy for a charming house that he saw at the foot of a garden in the Champs-Élysées. He stopped his carriage, and rang at the bell. The proprietor happened to be at home. The nabob made him the Eastern salutation, and entered. Walking around and surveying everything, he at last opened the conversation.

"This appears to be a lovely residence."

"Yes—it is very well," answered the resident, surprised, but still somewhat flattered.

"It seems convenient, though small."

"Convenient, certainly—but small, did you say?"

"No matter!—such as it is, I like it, and will buy it."

"But, Monsieur! it is not for sale!"

"That makes no difference—how much is it worth?"

"What is that to you, Monsieur, since I wish to keep it?"

"Parbleu!—what is the price?"

"Well, then—five hundred thousand francs."

"Good! I will give you seven hundred thousand."

The owner was staggered, and still hesitated.

"But, Monsieur, I reside here—and then my wife!"

"Here is a string of diamonds for your wife, and five thousand more francs for her pin-money. Will that content you?"

"But—but?"

"But what? Take a million francs, then, and give me the keys!"

That same evening, the nabob sent his horses home to the stables of his new house in the Champs-Élysées. (Translated with left forefinger upon incredulous nostril.)

CIVILITY IS A FORTUNE.—Civility is a fortune itself, for a courteous man always succeeds in life, and that even when persons of ability sometimes fail. The famous Duke of Marlborough is a case in point. It was said of him by one contemporary, that his agreeable manner often converted an enemy into a friend; and, by another, that it was more pleasing to be denied a favor by his Grace, than to receive one from other men. The gracious manner of Charles James Fox preserved him from personal dislike, even at a time when he was politically the most unpopular man in the kingdom. The history of our own country is full of examples of success obtained by civility. The experience of every man furnishes, if we but recall the past, frequent instances, where conciliatory manners have made the fortunes of physicians, lawyers, divines, politicians, merchants, and indeed, individuals of all pursuits. In being introduced to a student, his affability, or the reverse, creates instantaneously a prepossession in his behalf, or awakens unconsciously a prejudice against him. To men, civility is in fact, what beauty is to a woman; it is a general passport to favor; a letter of recommendation written in a language that every stranger understands. The best of men have often injured themselves by irritability and consequent rudeness, as the greatest scoundrels have frequently succeeded by their plausible manners. Of two men, equal in all other respects, the courteous one has twice the chance for fortune.—Philadelphian Ledger.
